

HSF news brief

Patients with HS and their treating physicians want and need information. And they want it to be accurate, measured and thoughtful. At the HSF, we believe that by providing information about this disease, we will help make HS an international health priority. Although we are a young organization, we have rapidly gained the support of both patients and experts in the community, and are excited to report our successful progress in meeting our goals – one step at a time. With your continued commitment, the global relationships we are building will surely catapult HS research to where it should have been a long time ago. ~ Michelle Barlow, President & Robert Howes, Vice President

Developing a Global Roadmap for HS Research

International HS Research Symposium
March 30-April 2, 2006 • Dessau, Germany

Hot Off the Press...

The June issue of Experimental Dermatology (EXD) is now available, which includes presentation summaries from “Directions 2006,” the First International HS Research Symposium.

The abstracts from the publication are available on the HSF website HERE, with permission from the publisher, and also from EXD online HERE.

The EXD is the Official Journal of the Hidradenitis Suppurativa Foundation. Published by Blackwell Munksgaard, the EXD publishes innovative and definitive reports and review articles covering all aspects of experimental dermatology. The HSF would like to express its deepest gratitude to EXD for this publication which promotes awareness, generates scientific and medical interest, and facilitates the global research of HS.

Corporate Giving

The HSF is seeking corporate and institutional gifts to help support existing programs and planned activities identified at “Directions 2006” International Symposium. For more information, please contact Michelle Barlow, HSF President, by phone at (858) 901-4747 or via email at info@hs-foundation.org.

Hot On the Press...

The first book to focus solely on Hidradenitis Suppurativa is expected to be available in mid to late September of this year. “Hidradenitis Suppurativa,” edited by Drs. Gregor B.E. Jemec, Jean Revuz, and James J. Leyden, and published by Springer, presents the best current knowledge about the diagnosis, pathogenesis and complications of HS; comprehensive guidelines on diagnosis and therapy; a description of the patients’ perspective, as well as patient information. Mainly written for dermatologists, surgeons, plastic surgeons, gynecologists, proctologists and patients, this book should also be of interest to anyone with an academic, personal or practical interest in HS. The Growing HSF Research Database

Since April 10, the HSF added 76 new PDFs to the FTP Database, which can be accessed for FREE by registering online at <http://hs-foundation.org/research/database.htm>

The Database now contains over 660 articles, abstracts and other research about HS, as well as a bibliography with 1250 citations. The documents offer historical perspectives that may provide new insights into the disease. They describe in detail HS patients experiencing chronic illness, depression, and pain. They discuss diagnosis and treatment, and offer new avenues and possible solutions for this frustrating condition.

We would also like to extend our thanks to patients and researchers for sending us new information, and encourage others to do the same. The provision of such valuable information costs time, effort and money. That is why we ask for your financial support to help support the mission, vision and programs of the HSF. Please visit our DONATE page and help us continue to update and maintain this comprehensive global resource.

Here is a list of the additions, which should act as a reminder to our subscribers to check the database frequently.
